GIANT XMAS TREE

Hong Kong Hotel
Feature

(BY E.J.M.)

Set in the middle of the Hong Kong Hotel lounge is a huge Christmas tree, hung with glittering decorations and sprinkled with artificial snow. It is no different from other trees except from its size, but one can not help but feel the spirit of goodwill and peace radiated from this symbol of the Yuletide season.

I spent a few minutes in the Hotel lounge to watch its effect on the people who were constantly coming in and going out and the result was most gratifying to my own belief of Santa Claus and the good cheer he brings.

A grumpy-looking old man entered the lounge scowling fiercely at the two red-coated bell-hops who had swung the doors open for him and continued to glare at the world in general until he stopped before the Christmas tree. Then he let his eyes settle on it and a Crown of annoyance crossed his features but it did not stay long. I saw the ghost of a smile play around the corners of his mouth, and looking around him, to the first person he saw he nodded pleasantly.

That man went on his way with a child-like expression on his face and I am sure he must have bestowed thanks on the Christmas tree for bringing back to him happy memories of childhood days.

From there I went around the town but no other tree like it could I find, and the thought crossed my mind that the Hong Kong Hotel guests will be found to be a cheerful and happy-go-lucky crowd while that Christmas tree towers its height over them.

There will be no issue of the "Hong Kong Daily Press" tomorrow.
Publication will be resumed on Monday.

CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

HONG KONG RESIDENTS MAKE MERRY UNTIL EARLY HOURS

Brilliant Entertainment At H.K. and Gloucester Hotels

CHURCH SERVICES TO-DAY

Throughout the world, in the home, in tramcars, buses, in the street, hotels, restaurants, in fact everywhere, when the clock chimed twelve last night, hands joined and the age-old but ever sincere wish "A Merry Christmas" was given and people wholeheartedly entered into the sparkling spirit of Yuletide re-created by Father Time.

Hong Kong residents made merry until the early hours of this morning. Words fail to adequately describe the scenes of gaiety that prevailed throughout the length and breadth of the Island and the mainland but one thing is sure—it was the maddest, gayest and merriest Christmas celebration in many years.

The depression was forgotten; tailors and employees, rich and poor mingled as one; everybody had found the right corner to prosperity.

Hong Kong was in truly festive garb. Local hotels once again led the festivities, large gatherings attending the various functions, while there were many private parties in addition to family reunions.

The traditional plum pudding, with brandy ablaze, will be consumed in quantity this evening when the festive season continues.

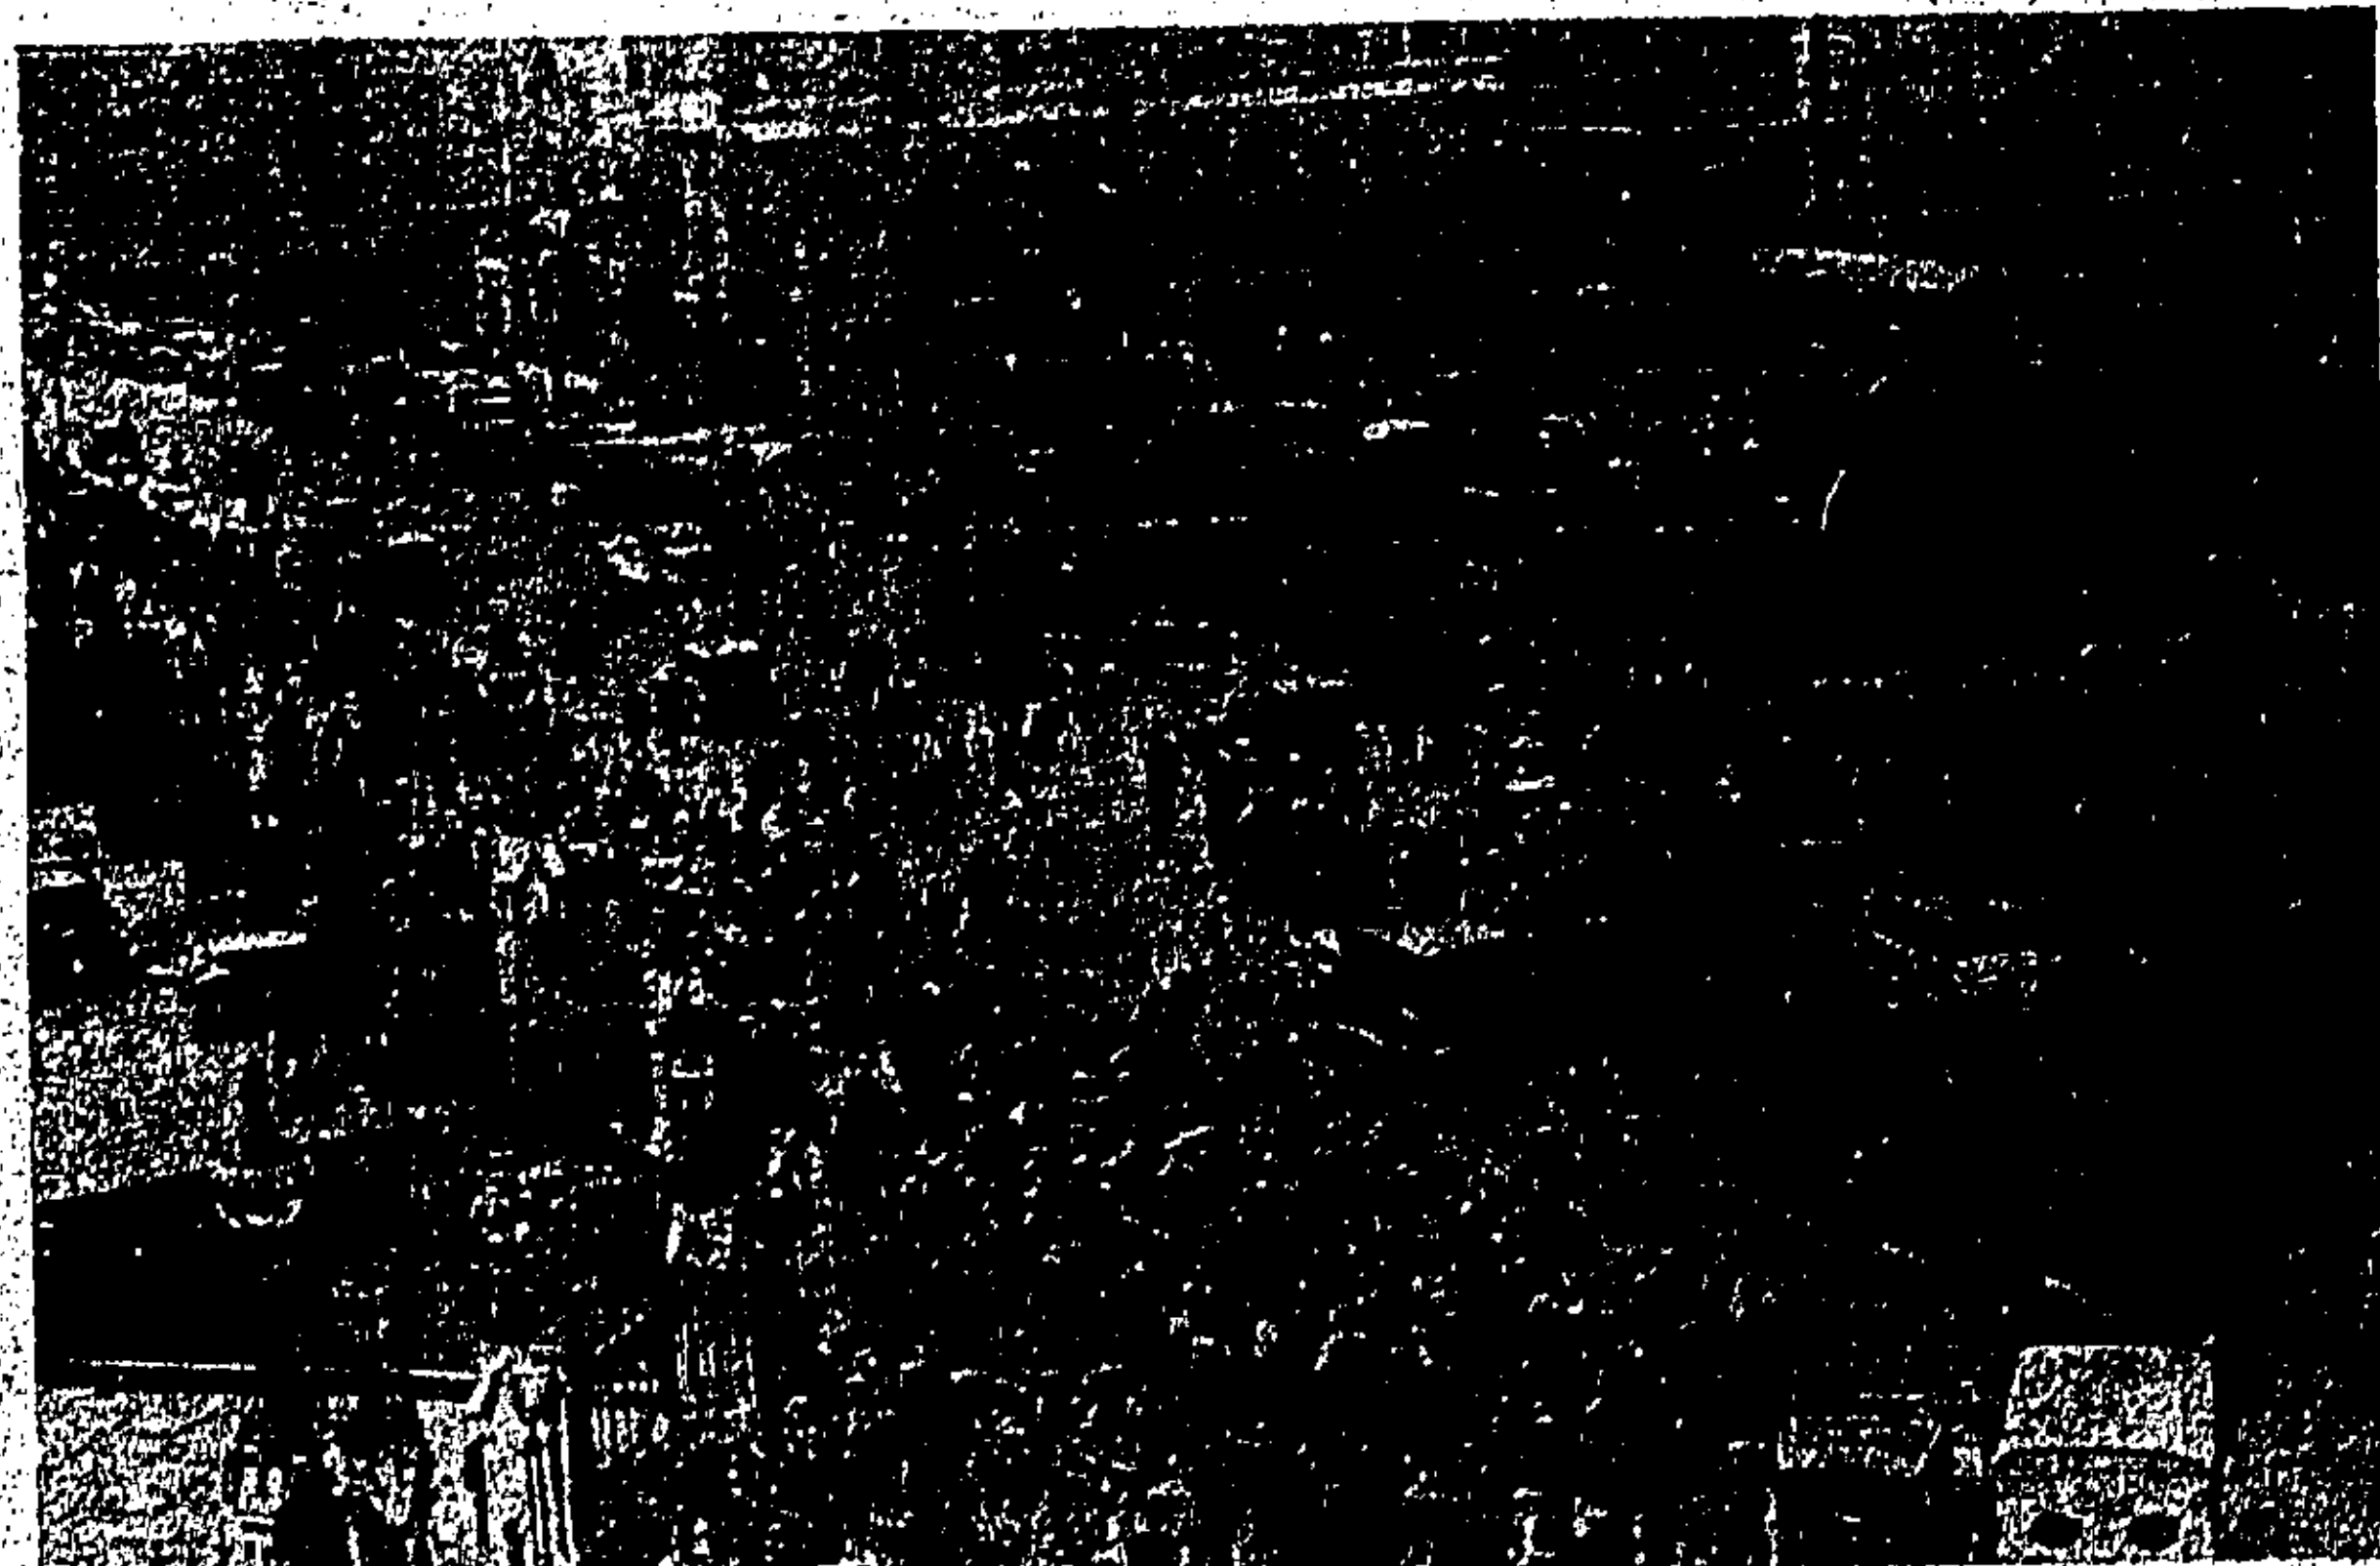

HONG KONG HOTEL

The Hong Kong Hotel offered a bumper carnival programme to their hundreds of patrons. The party lasted from 9 p.m. till 3 a.m. and the entertainment provided was easily the best Hong Kong merry-makers have enjoyed for many seasons.

In the popular Grippe, Norman Brooks' band furnished the latest in dance rhythm and in the roof garden the artistes were Bob and Bertie Hollman, Art Carmel's boys and Eula Hoff and Bob Burnett. In addition Vera Love and her ten festive follies delighted the crowd with their dance presentations interpreting the latest in jazz in excellent style and captivating rhythm.

New Colour Schemes For Furnishing

Satisfy a primitive instinct by introducing a good colour note into interior decoration schemes this winter! Colour is really a very simple matter, though some people would have us believe it to be highly complex.

Ultra-modern severity, with its off-whites, chromium, steel and glass, is good up to a point, but the fashionable neutral shades are not self-sufficient. They can only serve as a background. Most of us are even bereft of the rich glow of the firelight which ever since cave days has given a colour to the "anon."

SKILFUL ARRANGEMENT

There are several ways in which colour effects can be obtained, the most obvious and expensive is by having richly coloured hangings and upholstery thrown into relief against pastel walls. The simplest and most versatile method lies in the skilful combination of flowers, fruit, ceramics, brass, copper, and glass.

In this season's pottery there is a noticeable trend towards warmer colourings, such as speckled green, golden yellow and pale yellow, dusty pink and pale eau de Nil.

Try to capture some of the lavish colour effects of the old flower masters of the Low Countries and make a modern still-life. It is important to have the ingredients of your flower picture in harmony. Spiky yellow flowers harmonise well with a stone-coloured ginger jar splashed with jade green. The "Chinese corner" effect is intensified by the proximity of a beaten brass tray and Chinese porcelain plate with rich lacquer reds and royal blue tones.

A tall chattrouse-coloured jar filled with bronze and golden chrysanthemums or yellow mimosa looks distinguished arranged with one or two ornaments in black. A fruit bowl or basket, also in black, heaped up with pale green apples, gleaming oranges, yellow grapefruit and black grapes will round off the composition. A strip of rich brocade picking up the same colour theme, placed on the surface on which the flower picture is arranged, adds to the colourful effect.

HOW LIGHTING HELPS

These flower pictures look delightful placed on the broad top of a modern bookshelf or on an antique chest. A niche in the drawing-room or hallway up the staircase can be converted to stage charming flower pieces. Remove a rectangular, semi-circular or triangular piece from the wooden shelf of the niche, have an electric light installed in the cavity, which should then be covered over with the new sand-blasted glass. The flower picture can then be illuminated from below in a most attractive way. The concealed lighting brings out the colour values to perfection, and is also an excellent medium for displaying modern glass bowls and figures to the best possible advantage.

Stitched black silk is used to create a picturesque hat worn by beautiful Anita Colby. Unusual treatment of the shallow crown is featured, with a square top rising into slight peaks at each side. The wide brim dips becomingly over the right eye. The hat is banded in a braid of the rolled silk. Formerly one of the nation's foremost advertising models, Miss Colby has appeared in many recent RKO Radio pictures.

Fashion Notes

LATEST DESIGNS FROM PARIS

When line moves in dress there is a great stirring. Designers may make a pother with rope belts, poppyhead buttons, zipper-fastenings, flowers under the chin or on one eyebrow, but ultimately and with expedition these get into the common currency. Line is another thing, and even though it also can be copied there is still a great difference between its first sensitive appearance and the vain repetitions to which it gives rise. It is only necessary to think of the square shoulders of the "Dodo" period and, for that matter, of today, together with that of Josephine or of Trollope, to realise how line characterises a set of years. Some people stay in the line of their period just as bandeaux drifted over into high fringes and high fringes still cling on, in places, contemporaneously with the shingle. But periods change quickly, now, so that ultimately it should be possible almost to date a year by the line of the clothes worn in it. Only a few designers succeed in making marked differences of line. Mainbocher is one of these.

The model shows the backward trend of a number of coats and dresses. This shows more in the shorter coat of Bordeaux red, worn with a black velours skirt, than in the longer garments. Everything here has a backward sweep, balanced by the Maria Guy cap, which is one of those two-roomed affairs with the head in one and the hat almost, as it were, in the head. Redingotes are made in this way and the folds at the back emphasised by a close fit round the waist. Evening dresses also have the backward thrust, sometimes in the long skirt, sometimes in tunics about the length of the coat in the photograph. The skirt is made tight at the knees to emphasise the fall-away at the back gathers. When one remembers how tightly backs have fitted for some time now, this is a great change and one which, if it takes away from the natural lines, is of value when those lines are less than perfect, and also makes walking seem lighter and more springy.

THE BOLERO

In the mid-season collection Mainbocher strikes another novelty. The bolero has been used for some time, whether in the form of an unconventional Eton jacket or merely outlined with seams, braid, what not. For both day and evening dresses Mainbocher has substituted the closed bolero. This immediately gives something of the old small waist. It may also recall the Magyar period, especially when the shoulders are cut Magyar fashion. This mode is becoming to a good many people. It allows of a straight line from shoulder to waist; it shows there is a waist by leaving off abruptly just above the close-fitting belt, and it deals rather kindly with hips where these need it.

Another new line vaguely recalls the Empire, but also that slightly later period, when a deep frill was attached to the long slim skirt, later to broaden out into Queen Adelaide fashions. Long slim dresses are made for evenings with waists just above the natural line, or rising in a slight curve above this line. They sometimes have round necks attached to straps, which make them fairly low. The other version of this dress rises to the base of the throat and just covers the tips of the shoulders giving a rather square-cut line across the chest. There may be a frill round the neck, while from the knees there is a flounce with a heading that gives it a springy look. This knee-line includes some Jane Austen modes. With a long redingote, cut with huge revers and a close fit, goes a long dress with a slight waist, big-headed frill round the knees, and close-fitting sleeves. Evening dresses carry on this line, which is effected partly by means of a wide sash, the upper edge of which gives the high waist and the lower edge the more or less normal waist. When flowers adorn the shoulder straps and there is a tail to the long, plain skirt, more than a suggestion of period comes into being.

Main lines have to have subsidiary lines, and the long plainness of a good many dresses is varied by sweeping or retrenching neck lines. High-necked evening dresses have drapery from one shoulder, and along the line of the other and across the hips to correspond are rows of small buttons. Some evening necks reach down to the high waist in a narrow point, where a couple of large flowers are worn. Some plain dresses have short sleeves which are almost rectangular. This gives a good deal of character. Simple evening frocks with a belt and a flower at the V have revers at the back V which are so wide that they stick out a little beyond the shoulders and make a sort of background. Details here show many buttons anywhere, the use of plaid chiffons for evening, sleeves with high shoulder-points, a good deal of pleating. Juliet caps for evenings, gloves made of the stuff of the particular dress, pom-poms used for buttons, much flowered satin, bird-tails to otherwise short coats.

MY PREFERENCES IN COATS

(BY MYRNA LOY)

Coats are a necessary item in every girl's wardrobe.

Long coats, short coats, coats that serve a definite purpose, and those that are simply designed for style, the number depending upon the wardrobe budget of the individual.

As far as I am concerned, coats divide themselves naturally into two classes, sports and dress.

I like the sports models best.

In my opinion, polo coats are the most marvelous of any style ever to be adopted by women. Large, roomy, comfortable, with wide pockets and sash belts. The nice part about them lies in the fact that they may be had in any price range, and I can't imagine a wardrobe without one. They slip on easily over a tailored suit and allow plenty of room for motion. They may be knocked around and given all manner of abuse, and come through it smart and smiling.

Dress coats may be either all fur or cloth with a fur trimming. I prefer the cloth coat with fur trimming to the all-fur variety. Personally I feel that they are twice as smart. In buying such a coat, however, be certain that any fur appearing thereon is good fur. It does not necessarily have to be expensive. It is better, however, to buy a really good piece of inexpensive fur, rather than an inexpensive piece of good fur.

I have discovered suit coats to be life-savers. They make beautiful ensembles with stray skirts or frocks. A blue tailored suit and a grey tailored suit really mean four different combinations.

And so, I say, more power to coats. A smart coat, and any woman looks well-dressed.

PARIS FASHIONS

Paris. Regimentation has completely gone from evening dress. A settled lowness, length, width, collar, no longer exist, and women are not beyond the pale who do not form as men conform in the matter of their "dress" clothes. The Ardanne model is a good example of freedom in evening dress. With the black lace skirt and light top, with the little lace and chiffon coat, it has all the suggestion of evening without having any feature which is not at one time or other to be seen in day dresses. These have blouses, low necks, no sleeves, buckles. So does the evening frock, though with a difference.

The difference lies chiefly in the putting together of the various features and in the material used. It is true that linen or cotton may be used for evening frocks, but lace is still not worn for playing golf, unless it be of a coarse and woolly kind and used for sweaters. Evening dresses take a great many day styles and treat them differently. A swagger coat may still be made of tweed for the evening, but it is lined with velvet. Boleros are used, but they serve as contrasts or they are closed up to make a bodice. Blouses have been taken from the suit and blouse, but they are linked up with the evening skirt, as in the model. The loose and hanging back of the "swagger" coat appears in an evening frock by Mainbocher, but it is made of gold and apricot lame, and it helps to give a tunic-like effect. Evening dress may be anything, in short, provided that it looks different from day dress, even while employing the same devices.

Most original and effective is a day-frock of pale blue wool by a London designer. Each seam is oversewn with strands of the actual weave, so that it appears like leather-work trimming.

A beautiful gown in yellow cloque for evening has a corsage and sash gorgeously embroidered with gold sequins.

Another frock is draped in two coloured satins of pale mauve and a darker cyclamen. Beautifully coloured and fashioned flowers can often renovate not-too-new ensembles for evening where more ordinary stereotyped jewels are apt to be familiar and therefore suggest monotony.

Any gay note, provided it is in good taste, should have a special place in the Christmas festivities. Red is always the recognised colour leader for this season, and is likely to continue, though the deeper crimson of velvet will replace the vivid pillar-box scarlet. For the moment, the red necktie of great charm—is very popular in Paris for tucking in the coats of black cloth or Persian lamb.

Black inserted lace stockings are to be noticed occasionally. They are smart with a white chiffon dress trimmed with black ciré roses. We may possibly see a few examples of the fragile black hosiery once more, that is, of course, for special evening wear.

A grey lace-fronted embroidered silver stocking completing silver sandals looks well with a silver lamé gown.

sleeves well below the shoulder. This gives the broad-shouldered effect which is increasingly popular.

One of the most becoming lines is seen at the Allx collection, which contains beautiful draperies as well. This is a moderately fitting bodice with a low neck hung on by ordinary straps. The dress begins to flare just after the top of the hips have been modelled, and falls into three or four wide, handsome folds. The back of the dress spreads out fanwise in folds. The spread of the dress gives that balance of line which makes for elegance and lightness in the figure. This designer is particularly successful with the flares of her dresses. She plays several tunes on them. Sometimes they are more like short, wide trains, sometimes the fullness comes mostly in front and has a gracious appearance. In one dress a straight Tudor bodice goes with a plain but beautifully cut full skirt, swelling out slowly into severe folds from the waist. The bodice has shoulder-straps and also a halter twisted round the neck like a figure eight.

From classic dresses with fullness or draperies almost anywhere it is a pleasant change to turn to the stiffly fussy dress such as a white evening frock by Chanel with strap shoulders, a top belted and fitting to below the hips, and then seven fussy little frills, the effect being that of a chess queen. Chanel has a good many bunched frocks, some Spanish in cut. Some have Medici collars, pointed epaulettes and frills from the waist to the ground. The essence of these is a touch of stiffness lest they look untidy.

Halters and straps lend themselves also to many diversions. There is the wide scarf which is attached to the neckband and flows down behind like a cloak or train. Shoulder-straps worn with halters may have epaulettes attached to them. Many straps, whether on the shoulder or round the neck, have big flowers sewn to them. Instead of straps the halter may be a steadily narrowing bib up to the neck with a little strap round the back. This can be finished with a flower. Large flowers are worn at the neck, at the breast, on the hips. Muffs are made of flowers to go with evening frocks. Chanel has an elegant model fitting closely so that the material makes horizontal folds all down the hips and bodice and spreads when it is about to reach the floor. One of the straps is made of large flowers.

HALTER NECKS

While necks are high and low, high-fronted and low-backed, high altogether or with the least little V at the back, there is a general tendency towards the lower neck, and there are many halter necks. These are largely becoming because they involve a high bib, which is held up by the halter. Anyone who thinks of apron bibs will remember how singularly elegant these are. Bruyere sometimes takes the bib up to the throat, with a heart-shaped neck in it under the chin. This designer also crosses over pieces of bib or carries it up to one shoulder with a broad strap for the other shoulder. The halter is sometimes turned into a harness with a crisscross of straps which leave the shoulders bare. The straight-across low neck may be suspended by a halter and have small puffed

The Choice Of Furs

Influence Of The New Lengths

BY THE HON. MRS. C. W. FORESTER

The first spell of real wintry weather has brought out many charming models in fur. Furs for the present season are presented most attractively. A great change has come with the differing lengths of the newer models. For younger people and fairly slim figures the three-quarter and five-eighth lengths are more becoming than the full-length in a heavy skin. The best and most finely-worked skins, sable, mink, ermine and Kolinsky, can always look delightful fashioned on straight lines and narrowing to the feet.

The average woman who wishes to look her best and be warm can seldom aspire to such luxurious pelts. For her choice coneys, mole, Indian lamb, goat, Persian paw, bearskin (shaved) are work attractively into the newer three-quarter swagger-shaped coat, sometimes made with a decisive flare at the hem or cut on the straighter tunic line. Slightly longer and often more becoming to the taller figure are the five-eighth models showing just a little of a narrow wool or velvet skirt beneath.

The fuller sleeve is wise in winter. Balloon and leg-of-mutton shapes appeared, but they did not long continue. The usual swagger models show a nicely-squared shoulder, with the rest of the sleeve coming smaller near the wrist, but roomy enough to allow of the wearing of a slim tailored wool or velvet suit underneath.

Where there is any sort of flare at the hem balance is struck by a fairly full-topped sleeve. Collars are flat this season or shaped to allow of the high hats or back collars being undisturbed.

The shorter length coat, especially in the fashionable astrakhan and the less expensive skins, is the best choice, but when the fur season begins to wane the exclusive designers will swerve suddenly back to the straighter coat lines. No doubt there will be many little differences from the previous idea of straightness, such as hidden folds and pleats, unseen gussets and other devices, but the stressed simplicity is fairly certain to exist.

where colours and fabrics are distinctive.

Headgear must be influenced by the vogues in fur. The fur toque, much lightened in style and weight, is popular at the moment. Half-fur and half-velvet is the favourite, with sometimes the addition of beautiful feathers or flowers. White or pastel-pink velvet is lovely mixed with black astrakhan for wearing with a fur coat of the same.

Golden-brown velvet and wine-coloured, flowers with a decorative brown veil looked well with a short summer ermine coat worn over a velvet frock.

A turban of grey velvet and old lace, with green and grey feathery tips, looked effective at a recent wedding, where it was sponsored by a grey-haired woman who wore a flared tunic of moleskin. One caught glimpses of a lace waistcoat to a striped grey fabric frock. Suede and kid shoes and gloves in a dark green and dull mole-grey silk hosiery completed the ensemble.

One cannot to-day see any striking toilette without noticing the minute details. If these fall there could not be interest in such a simple outfit as the one I have described.

It should be a cheering thought to the less-well-off woman that she can, with good taste and carefully practical and most effective planning, secure for herself perfectly practical and most effective garments at a fairly small expenditure.

Richer women can indulge in more than one fur coat, in addition to the very smart new black cloth models trimmed lavishly with Persian lamb, or long velvet coloured or black models, slit and slashed with mink and sable.

Capes and muffs, too, of silver fox and the shorter fur ties dyed to special tones, are all in the wardrobes of the dress stylists.

The fur fabrics are not to be despised, though they are never as warm as any sort of real skin. For the country they are effective when the details are correctly sporting. With the imitation ocelot or leopard, sheep-skin and lamb, leather accessories are in good style. Many fur fabric three-quarter and five-eighth length coats are warmly lined camel hair or lamb's wool. This is good when rain, wind and mud are to be encountered.

RETURN OF HEAVY JEWELLERY

Heavy Victorian jewellery is returning to fashion this Christmas. Women are choosing flat, flexible necklaces in gold and silver, as heavy and as simple as possible, fitting close to the base of the neck. Bracelets and long earrings to match look as becoming with the severe lines of modern dress as with our grandmothers' styles.

Georgian silver shilling and two-shilling pieces are in much demand for buttons, often made up to show the "head" and "tail" alternately.

Hebrew silver amulets, from 200 to 400 years old, are being increasingly used as belt buckles. Also in favour are enormous rings made of semi-precious stones. Some are as much as 1 1/2 in. in length and are made of amethyst, turquoise, topaz, malachite, of agate, coral, garnet, chrysoprase and quartz.

Among the rarest large rings are Indian mirror rings, in which naught girls are able to watch themselves while they are dancing. Some of them are 2 1/2 in. in diameter.

A particularly valuable specimen consists of central mirror surrounded with flat diamonds and emeralds, the whole backed with Jaipur enamel.

The taste of the Royal family for old jewellery is well known, but it is perhaps not generally known that the Princess Royal collects jewelled owls and miniatures of St. George, while the Duke of Gloucester has a large collection of miniature carved Japanese and Chinese ivory figures.

HATS BY ELISSA LANDI

"Dress from the head down." This is the advice given by Elissa Landi in matters of smart wardrobes.

Miss Landi is one of the few players in Hollywood with a flair for designing chic chapeaux, and she insists upon designing her own hats.

"It is absolutely necessary that a hat correspond to the mood of the frock for which it is intended," she explained. "The wrong type of hat, even though it is becoming, has the power to destroy the effect of an entire ensemble."

While the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer actress doesn't go into extremes in her hat wardrobe, the various bonnets are all chic and individual in their design.

For a grey, military spectator sports frock she created a military hat of matching grey trimmed in the jade green that appeared on the dress. Two chenille balls and a modified visor brim characterized the hat.

"MUMMY'S BOYS"

Murder, mystery, and merriment among the ancient tombs of Egypt are in store for Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey's legion of fans when the popular team of comedies appear to-day at the Queen's Theatre in "Mummy's Boys."

The crazy comical nineteenth century feature together, this RKO Radio film recalls the famous "curse of King Tut" so widely head-lined in connection with strange deaths that struck many members of the expedition that opened his tomb.

A lusty satire on the "terror type" of mystery thriller, it takes the boys from ditch digging in New York to shovelling in the valley of the Kings, graveyard of Egypt's Pharaohs, in the face of a similar course. The fact that a friend is employing the supernatural threat of death as a blind for his dirty work spices the hilarity with thrills and leads to a high-tension climax when the boys and their new leading lady, Barbara Pepper, are trapped in a spooky underground crypt with the murderer.

Miss Pepper, who romances opposite Wheeler, is a lively young blonde beauty who got her start by being "glorified" by the late Florenz Ziegfeld. In the Wheeler and Woolsey tradition of plentitude of pulchritude, ten attractive young ladies romance with Woolsey.

With Moroni Olsen, Frank M. Thomas, Willie Best, Mitchell Lewis and Francis McDonald, topping the cast, "Mummy's Boys" was directed by Fred Guiol.

Lee Marcus, who supervised "The Nit Wits" and "Love On a Bet" as well as the above mentioned comedies, produced. The screen play was penned by Jack Townley, Philip G. Epstein and Charles Roberts from an original story by Townley and Lew Lipton.

AT THE ALHAMBRA

Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern in "Walking On Air" showing at the Alhambra Theatre.

"WALKING ON AIR"

Something timely, different, and amusingly made in romantic comedy will hit the screen of the Alhambra Theatre to-day, with the showing of RKO Radio's "Walking On Air," co-starring Gene Raymond and Ann Sothern and featuring Jessie Ralph and Henry Stephenson.

Taken from the widely-read Cosmopolitan Magazine story "Count Pete" by Francis C. Cockrell, this latest Raymond-Sothern feature is parallel to their recent "Hooray for Love" only in that, although not a musical it is spiced with hit music and gives them plenty of opportunity to sing while romping through unusual heart tangles. The melodies, by Bert Kalmar, Harry Ruby, and Sid Silvers include "Cabin On the Hilltop," "My Heart Wants to Dance" and "Let's Make a Wish."

The story draws sophisticated humor and good-natured horse-play out of an adventurous young college graduate's madcap solution of the unemployment problem. The hilarity starts when Raymond hires himself out to Miss Sothern, a willful and uncontrollable Beverly Hills heiress, to help her overcome her father's objections to a fortune-hunter with whom she fancies herself in love. The complications set in when Raymond falls in love with his employer after doing much too well at his job, which is to pose as an insufferably arrogant foreign nobleman and to insult her father and aunt so thoroughly that they will consider the favoured suitor a rare catch by comparison.

A scene from H.G. Wells' "Things to Come" showing to-day at the Majestic Theatre.

"OUR RELATIONS"

When Laurel and Hardy unknowingly have their sailor twin brothers come ashore to their quiet seaport town, the plot is set in "Our Relations," to create the most involved situations with ensuing Double-Trouble and Double-Laugh during the ten years this world-famous comedy team has highly entertained the world. The new picture starts to-day at the King's Theatre. It is a Stan Laurel production.

The two sailors are bad lads. They ran away from home, went to sea and were reported hanged for mutiny. So great is the families' disgrace that Laurel and Hardy withhold information—even from their wives—that they have twin brothers. And when the almost forgotten twins come ashore, entrusted with a valuable pearl ring by their ship captain (Sidney Toler), they meet two girls the fun is on. Mistaken identity is made the basis for many hilariously funny scenes at sea and on land with some tragedy when gangster appear in quest of the pearl ring.

"Our Relations" is something entirely different and more entertaining than any of the past Laurel and Hardy feature comedies. The excellent supporting cast features besides those, already mentioned, James Finlayson, Alan Hale, Arthur Housman, Ralf Harlowe and Noel Madison. The picture was directed by Harry Lachman.

Investigations were made and it was found that the girl was an unregistered mul tsai. She was registered before she left with the family to the country but when she returned she was not registered.

The girl said that she wanted to return to her parents. The defendant was fined $50.

ALLEGED ROBBERY

Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday with robbing Chan Keung, 51, Tung Choi Street, of a stone appendage, $5, a suit of clothing, and Ip Lee of a metal wrist watch, $8.10 (Hong Kong currency), and a gold and jade finger ring.

"VALIANT IS THE WORD FOR CARRIE"

A new film personality of exceptional dramatic and emotional ability will be introduced at the Queen's Theatre on Sunday, when the motion picture version of Barry Benefield's best-selling novel, "Valiant Is The Word For Carrie," begins its run.

The newcomer is Gladys George, famed stage actress, whose portrayal of the woman of shady repute who is resurrected and ennobled by two little children she adopted, is one of the finest things ever captured by the camera and is certain to become one of the most widely discussed film roles of the screen.

Miss George, as Carrie Snyder, brings up two homeless waifs as her own. Through great sacrifice and over the greatest obstacles she rears them to glorious young manhood and womanhood. Peace and contentment abide with the little household until the boy, played by John Howard, becomes involved with Isabel Jewell, an adventuress. Arline Judge, who plays the part of the other waif, is in love with Howard and, broken-hearted, she marries another man.

In a frantic effort to restore harmony in the little family, Carrie becomes involved in a jail-break with the adventuress, and is arrested. Before the trial she is confronted with a grave dilemma. If she fights the case she has a chance for freedom. But then her past, which is unknown to the children, will be brought back to life. If she doesn't fight it she goes to jail but her past will remain a secret.

Merchant Leaves Large Estate LENGTHLY WILL DRAWN UP

Li Yuk Tong alias Li Noon, trading as the Yuk Yuen Company, merchant, who died at the Young Woo Hospital, Happy Valley, on January 1, 1936, at the age of 85 years, left local estate sworn at $187,800.

A petition by Li Tze Chung, Li Ping Fiu, merchants, for granted of probate of the will has been granted by the Supreme Court.

The will of Li Yuk Tong states to part—

"Whether the estate left by me is a big or a small one I leave that to destiny though my sons and daughters must base morality on their standard and attach importance to their personal character. As their predecessor has formed the estate with painstaking efforts the descendants should be contented with their lot and maintain the estate in contact."

"While I was young I followed my father and brothers to go to America by crossing the Pacific Ocean in a sailing boat and to make a living there. I underwent much difficulties for over 60 years and returned to Hong Kong to carry on business in my middle age."

"When I was over 50 years, that is before the era of the Chinese Republic, I was engaged in revolutionary activities."

"Admiral Li Chun reverted to the just cause in the 9th moon of the 3rd year of Sun Tong (1911) of the late T'ang Dynasty (Wu) Hon Man and I risked ourselves by going to Canton to take over control there. We established a new Government and Mr. Hon Man ordered me to return to the Colony to raise funds without loss of time from the Chinese residents in Hong Kong to meet the pressing need of the Government."

The Canton Government appointed me the Commissioner of Finance of Kwangtung. A merchant, as I was, I did not in fact venture to take up an official career. As it was a matter of serving my country and fulfilling the duty of every citizen I was in duty bound not to decline the appointment."

Stephen said that the police raided the house at 341, Portland Street yesterday but there was only half a gallon of spirit distilled. He said that they were only producing it in a small scale about three or four gallons daily.

First and second defendants fined $170 or 12 weeks imprisonment, and the third $75 or 8 eight weeks.

OFFICER FINED

Li Withers, R. A. was fined $10 by Mr. E. Himsforth at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday on a summons for allowing his dog to be abroad in Chatham Road unmuzzled and unleashed.

"THE SEA SPOILERS"

You will have an opportunity to see for the first time on the screen the heroic activities that the Coast Guard engages in, almost every day in the year, in its crusade against smuggling, seal poaching and other illicit enterprises, when Universal's "The Sea Spoilers" opens at the Alhambra theatre on Sunday.

This adventure picture, starring John Wayne and a grand cast, glorifies the thrills and romance of the Coast Guard patrol in Alaska. "The Sea Spoilers" depicts dramatically the depredations of a gang of sea-going bandits who constantly pit their wits against the Coast Guardsmen in their nefarious trade of slaughtering seals along our northern coast.

It is a new and vigorous type of role for the talents of John Wayne, and he plays it to the hilt, supported by Nan Grey, Fuzz Knight and William Bakewell. Frank Strayer directed.

DARING BURGLAR Sentenced To Six Months' Hard Labour

Lung Ping, unemployed, appearing at the Central Magistracy before Mr. W. Schofield for aiding and abetting in a burglary at 284, Lockhart Road on December 23. Acting Sub-Inspector Darkin who prosecuted said that the defendant worked several others. They rent a house for a few days only and in those days they steal by using ropes to let them down to a lower story and using a spanner or some expending jack to open the windows of the premises.

The defendant was caught leaving the staircase of 284, Lockhart Road on December 23 and was also seen by a detective throwing the clothing down the stairs.

The police officer asked his Worship to take a serious view of the case.

His Worship: I always take these burglary cases seriously. A.S.I. Darkin added that it was a very daring job. The defendant risked his life by jumping over roofs of six to seven stories high.

Sentence of six months' hard labour was imposed.

Macfadyen at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday on the charge of stealing two gold neck-chains with appendages, 2 pieces of jade and 6 Hong Kong silver collars from 29, Shek Kip Mei Street on December 23.

Inspector Elston asked for 48 hours remand, which was granted.

The People, The Time,
The Meaning

(BY SCRUTATOR).

It is long since the legendary glory of the angels assailed the surprised eyes of the shepherds of Bethlehem. Centuries have rolled away since the eastern star-gazers beheld a new star in their sky. But the central significance of both events has never failed to thrill men's hearts.

THE PEOPLE

There were many eminent men of learning, and many powerful magnates living in the Holy Land; there were scholars of profound and curious lore; there were holy men like John the Baptist, men who had dedicated themselves to lives of austerity and self-denial, who even regarded the revelation of home-life as a distraction from man's true purpose, but it was to none of these people nor any of their ilk that the divine revelation was made.

There is something significantly true in the mystic legend—the greatest news which the world has ever heard was broken first to the minds of simple men, engaged upon the common occupations of their lives. They were men untroubled by ambitions or the cares of high position. They passed their days close to natural things beneath which the mystic presence so often lingers. To such simple natures, to men and women of gentle and reverent spirit, God still reveals Himself and His purposes in fullest measure.

This is the peculiar genius of Christ's religion, it means most to those who have the penetrating simplicity to see and feel what it means, whose minds are uncluttered by theory nor be clouded by creeds.

Ordinary folk have proved themselves most capable of Christ.

Without intellectual distinctions, devoid of social eminence, they yet possess the essential greatness of soul which makes them able to undertake the greatness of the Christian life. To them

Christ means rejoicing. From the first dawning of Christmas until to-day a new story has shone on all common scenes, a new joy is alive for the human heart which opens to receive the Saviour of all the world.

THE TIME

The historical occasion of Christ's advent is truly significant. The little country where he was born was sunk deep in the night of darkness and depression and tyranny, but the darkness gave birth to the highest illumination which has yet lighted the world. Yet the unobtrusiveness of Christ's coming, the insignificance of the first flaming of his spirit are such as to bring hope and new faith in hardest times. The highest came to his own in quietness and in natural ways, and almost stole into the world. The birth of Jesus was the beginning of God's highest revelation and men's purest achievement, after it, religion and life became one; revelation was no longer confined to the sanctuary but became the companion of common life.

THE MEANING

The story goes on to tell that Christ was as poor as the poorest shepherd yet in him heaven dwelt. Earth and its power took no notice of a child laid in a manger. But deep in the realms of Truth, where earthly majesty has no place and ecclesiastical authority no power, might no right and rank no dignity, the child who lived to love and die for man and God was ushered with honour. Christianity restored humanity to men.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE
LESSON SERMONFirst Church Of Christ,
Scientist

The subject of the Lesson Sermon in all churches of Christ, Scientist, on December 27, will be: "Christian Science."

The Golden Text will be: "He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the son." (II John 1:9).

Among others, the following citations from the Bible will be read: "And behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed; and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy; Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee. And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, This man blasphemeth. And Jesus knowing their thoughts said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts? For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house. And he arose, and departed to his house." (Matt. 9:2-7).

The Lesson Sermon will also include the following passages from the Christian Science Textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "We acknowledge Jesus' atonement as the evidence of divine, efficacious Love, unfolding man's unity with God through Christ Jesus the Way-shower; and we acknowledge that man is saved through Christ, through Truth, Life, and Love as demonstrated by the Galilean Prophet in healing the sick and overcoming sin and death. Atonement is the exemplification of man's unity with God, whereby man reflects divine Truth, Life, and Love. Jesus of Nazareth taught and demonstrated man's oneness with the Father, and for this we owe him endless homage. His mission was both individual and collective. He did lifes work aright not only in justice to himself, but in mercy to mortals, to show them how to do theirs, but not to do it for them nor to relieve them of a single responsibility. Jesus acted boldly, against the accredited evidence of the senses, against Pharisaical creeds and practices, and he refuted all opponents with his healing power, Jesus aided in reconciling man to God by giving man a truer sense of Love, the divine Principle of Jesus' teachings, and this truer sense of Love redeems man from the law of matter, sin, and death by the law of spirit—the law of divine Love. When will Jesus' professed followers learn to emulate him in all his ways and to imitate his mighty works? It is possible—yes, it is the duty and privilege of every child, man, and woman, to follow in some degree the example of the Master by the demonstration of Truth and Love, of health and holiness. Christians claim to be his followers, but do they follow him in the way that he commanded? Hear these imperative commands: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect!" "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature!" "Heal the sick!" (Pages 497, 18, 19, 37).

THE UNDEFEATED COLD

The extensive test of the method of inoculation with anti-catarhal vaccine against catarhal disability which has been carried out by the London Post Office is of great value as evidence. The test failed to substantiate the method; in other words colds and other catarhal troubles were neither prevented by inoculation nor limited in their spread. This experience was not confined to a single area. Volunteers were invited from various typical large towns and some hundreds were inoculated in the autumn of the three years 1933 to 1935. There was a large "control" group. It was found that, over the whole group and for the whole period, there was practically no reduction of sickness among the inoculated as compared with the uninoculated. Nor was improvement, observed among the inoculated after inoculation. The Chief Medical Officer of the Post Office has decided accordingly that he is not justified in making use of anti-catarhal inoculation as a routine measure, and with this decision all must necessarily agree. There will be general agreement too that, apart from its immediate value, the test is important as given fresh reason for doubt whether the cause of catarhal conditions is bacterial, for it seems to be broadly true that the success of preventive inoculation is related to the identity of the inoculated matter with the causative agent of the disease.

Thus there is support of a negative kind in the Post Office experiment for those who believe that catarhal conditions are virus diseases. In Britain the study of virus diseases, which owes so much to the inspiration and encouragement of the late Sir Walter Fletcher, has already advanced far beyond the speculative stage. The discovery of a vaccine against distemper in dogs is solid achievement; the discoveries about influenza which have followed seem to promise a practical application in the future. It may well be that the approach to prevention of catarhal ailments lies along this line and that the elimination of "false scents" is certainly to be welcomed as removing hindrances from the path of progress. It is to be welcomed further, as a measure of professional and popular enlightenment. There is a tendency in human nature to assume that because a particular method has given good results in one direction, it can be trusted to give good results in all. Nature is by no means so easily dealt with and appears to defeat, sooner or later, every attempt to cope with her by rule-of-thumb methods.

With the prevalence of colds and catarhals, Hong Kongites suffer from this time of the year. Local health authorities might do well to adopt any precautionary measures the London Post Office may decide upon as a result of their investigations.

"We should regard it as a compliment that foreigners settle down in this country," says an M.P. Immigration is the sincerest form of flattery.

Mistletoe Kisses

An Xmas Ditty

BY

"ACWO"

When twilight creeps along the lane
And snow begins to fall,

When lamps are lit, and holly brought
To decorate the hall,

The lovers bough is hung again
And those who pause below

Must never miss a chance to kiss
Beneath the mistletoe.

What's in a kiss?

Ah, Who can tell?

Maybe it's Heaven,

Maybe it's, . . . well, . . .

Quite incandescent, . . . or freezingly cold,

Almost too cautious, or rather too bold;

Fugitive pleasures,

Treat them as such.

Meaning so little

Or meaning so much,

Just mistletoe-kisses! Till you forget,

Link them with laughter, but not with regret.

So every Jack should chase his Jill

And take a sporting chance;

For every Jill who loves her Jack

Is ready for romance:

But whether Cupid comes to stay,

Or merely comes to GO,

Don't count the cost of kisses lost

Beneath the mistletoe

What's in a kiss?

Ah, Who can say?

Sometimes it's careless,

Sometimes it's gay;

Kiss of an "Old Flame" (ripe for recapture)

Kiss of your Lover, (Absolute rapture)

Mistletoe kisses

In a dim hall

Sweeter than any

Still I recall

Kisses YOU gave me, I dream of them now,

Under the magical Mistletoe Bough.

NEW EXHIBITION BUILDING

Mammoth Structure At Earl's Court

London, Dec. 23.

The exhibition building now being erected at Earl's Court, which when completed, will house the annual British Industries Fair and which will be the biggest structure in reinforced concrete yet built in Europe, is approaching the stage when the roofing will be thrown over the great spans, the central one of which will be 250 feet by 350 feet.

Underneath there will be an arena with seating for 20,000. The floor incorporates a device by which a section will sink to make a swimming pool 200 feet by 100 feet, with capacity of 2,000,000 gallons.

Early stages of construction were hampered by the necessity of enclosing in tunnels six lines of railway track without interrupting the service. This difficult engineering feat has been accomplished with only a small departure from the original scheme of progress.

Drilling in Pfattersdorf, in Lower Austria, has already produced oil though in small quantities, and hopeful signs of oil have also been encountered near Graz and Vienna, and in the Enns valley.

Dr. Vetter also states that it is probable that the main oil sand has not yet been struck in the drilling at Pfattersdorf and that still better results may be expected. He declared that the future prospects for obtaining considerable quantities of petroleum from Austrian soil are promising.

ESCAPADES OF AN AVIATRIX

French Runaway In British Court

London, Dec. 23.

Madame Schmeder, beautiful young Frenchwoman who crashed a plane into an English farmyard on December 22, appeared in Bow Street police court to-day.

She is in custody on an extradition warrant and has been remanded for a week. The French authorities are seeking her extradition on a charge that she attempted to murder a young aviator named Lallemant.

Lallemant was found by airport officials staggering about the flying field where he had landed his plane a few minutes before. He told a remarkable story.

A lady passenger shot him in the back, the bullet penetrating his neck, when he was flying high above the city. By a tremendous effort of will he was able to land his machine. The woman, thereupon, threatened him with a revolver, drove him out of the plane, took the controls herself and flew away.

Later in the day a Frenchwoman crashed a plane in England, but was unhurt. Questioned, she said she had no idea she was flying over England. She did not say where she thought she was or where she intended to be. The British authorities arrested her on the French Surete's request, through the Foreign Office.

ISOLATION NOT DESIRED

Policy Of United States

Buenos Aires, Dec. 23.

In his closing address at the inter-American peace conference here, Mr. Cordell Hull, the United States Secretary of State, declared that he could not "emphasise too strongly that American nations were not moving towards a policy of continental isolation."

"We are unmoved by the mirage of self-containment but are aware of its perils. In a close-knit, interdependent world we see the folly of seeking to build a Chinese wall around our hemisphere. Our purpose is not to isolate this continent but to chart our own path to peace, and thereby set a practical example to other parts of the world."

"The free peoples of the world reject the theory that war is inevitable and are no longer thrilled by the panoply of militarists. They would cry halt to any who, through love of power, would break the peace. They believe that the future of peace can be assured by the development of public opinion everywhere that will utterly repudiate the acts of statesmen propagating doctrines of militarism," said the American chief delegate.

EXCLUSIVE FEATURE DIVERTING ASPECTS

Hong Kong A More Pleasant City Than Shanghai.

BY PHILIP NESBITT

Shanghai as I recall it (two months ago) is bedlam compared to peaceful, tidy Hong Kong. In Shanghai every one scurries. Every one is out to make money from the next. The 'yicksha' boys fight and howl, the taxis out do each other in blowing horns, the old Whangpoo river boats let forth their ransionate whistles without cessation and as I say, it is BEDLAM.

My first impression of Hong Kong, as contrasted to Shanghai, was of an abiding 'sunday afternoon' quality. (This only by comparison). I have since discovered that Hong Kong too, has its form of bedlam. But even now, as I regard the Hong Kong scene, I am still impressed with its order. I find that I consider the law, as expressed through the dignified magistrates of Hong Kong, somewhat severe. I am sorry for the impoverished coolies who artfully contrive to scrape a pittance amount of gold leaf from a sign board, get caught, and are docked three months of their freedom for that small sin, and etc. I am sorry when I discover that a white inhabitant receives more consideration in the dealing out of 'justice' than the native coolie. Other things too, impress me negatively. However, on the whole, there are many generous folk here, people with whom it is a pleasure to work and who understand the highlights of a friendly attitude.

The picture at the top of these impressions is of two inhabitants of Shanghai. Immediately upon seeing the drawing, you will observe the contrast to the people (Chinese) who live and work in Hong Kong. The ever present element of stolidity, as discovered in the Chinese temperament is evident in this drawing.

It strikes me that the Empire-preserving Colonial resident could take many a feather from the hat of Chinese humour and understanding. As indeed, could the remainder of the world.

EFFORTS TO HALT SPANISH WAR CONTROL OVER FOREIGN ASSISTANCE

Detailed Plan Approved By London Committee

London, December 23.
The International Non-Intervention Committee, after reviewing the replies from the Spanish belligerents and the proposal for control of the import of arms, approved a detailed plan for supervising the movement of arms and munitions into Spain by land and sea.

January 1 is fixed as the time limit for replies from the Governments concerned. If their acceptance can be secured by then, the scheme will be forwarded to both parties in Spain for their approval with a limit of ten days.—Reuter.

London, Dec. 23.
The Non-Intervention Committee met for two hours at the Foreign Office to-day. The following resolution was unanimously adopted: "Deeply impressed with the need for doing everything possible to limit the scope of the present war in Spain, and to prevent the development of conditions which might prejudice the good understanding and harmony of the peoples of Europe, and being convinced that strict application of the non-intervention agreement is essential to these ends, the Committee agree that it is of the highest importance that a scheme of supervision designed to secure the application of agreement should be brought into effective operation at the earliest possible date, and have undertaken to request their Governments to furnish them with the necessary authority to secure this end." The Portuguese representative indicated that the attitude of his Government regarding the proposed scheme of supervision remained unchanged.

The Committee had before them a report prepared by technical advisers dealing with technical aspects of the proposed scheme of supervision. The Committee agreed to refer this report to their respective Governments with a view to obtaining a final decision thereon at the earliest possible moment, and, subject to the above, authorised the Chairman to communicate the terms of the scheme to the two parties in Spain on Jan. 1, unless before that date any of the Governments represented had asked that the question should be considered at a further meeting.

FURTHER POINTS

The Committee further agreed that the communication to the two parties should contain a request that they should furnish, within ten days of receipt, a reply on whether they were prepared to co-operate in the proposed scheme. The Committee also agreed to request the respective Governments to notify the Committee in writing not later than January 4 whether they were prepared to contribute towards the cost of the proposed system of supervision over the land and sea frontiers of Spain and Spanish dependencies, in proportions which already had been suggested to the Committee.

The Committee had before them a further report by technical advisers on the methods by which the system of supervision over the entry into Spain of aircraft by air might be established. The Committee agreed to submit a report to the respective Governments with a view to the Governments concerned furnishing the Committee with their observations thereon at the earliest possible moment.

The Committee had under consideration the question of the need for the adoption of a uniform interpretation of the obligations incurred by the Governments in adhering to the non-intervention agreement. The Committee agreed to submit to their respective Governments certain proposals designed to secure the desired degree of uniformity.—British Wireless.

VOLUNTEERS SENT TO SPAIN

German Action Causes Concern In London

London, Dec. 23.
It is understood that Mr. Anthony Eden the Foreign Secretary, has expressed the serious view which the British Government takes with respect to the sending of volunteers by Germany to the civil war front in Spain. He stated his case to Herr Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German Ambassador, recently, and the Ambassador has now left for Berlin to report the British position to Herr Adolf Hitler.

Mr. Eden and Herr von Ribbentrop also discussed the prospects of a Locarno conference.—Reuter.

NO EXCHANGE OF PRISONERS

St. Jean de Luz, Dec. 23.
Hopes for the exchange of 4,000 hostages before Christmas, between the Spanish Government and insurgent forces, have been dashed by the breakdown of negotiations to-day.

A complete deadlock has now been reached. The main difficulty concerns men of military age. There were scenes of the most poignant description in the crowd on the quay, when a British warship arrived here from Bilbao with only a few refugees on board, and not one of the expected hostages.—Reuter.

SOVIET STEAMER SINKING

Country Considerably Agitated

Moscow, Dec. 23.
Protest demonstrations throughout Russia against the sinking of the Russian steamer "Komsomol" by a Spanish nationalist warship are now taking on a more pronounced form. Huge mass meetings have now been held in all principal Russian harbour cities including Leningrad, Odessa, Archangel and Vladivostok in which the naval detachments joined with the civil population.

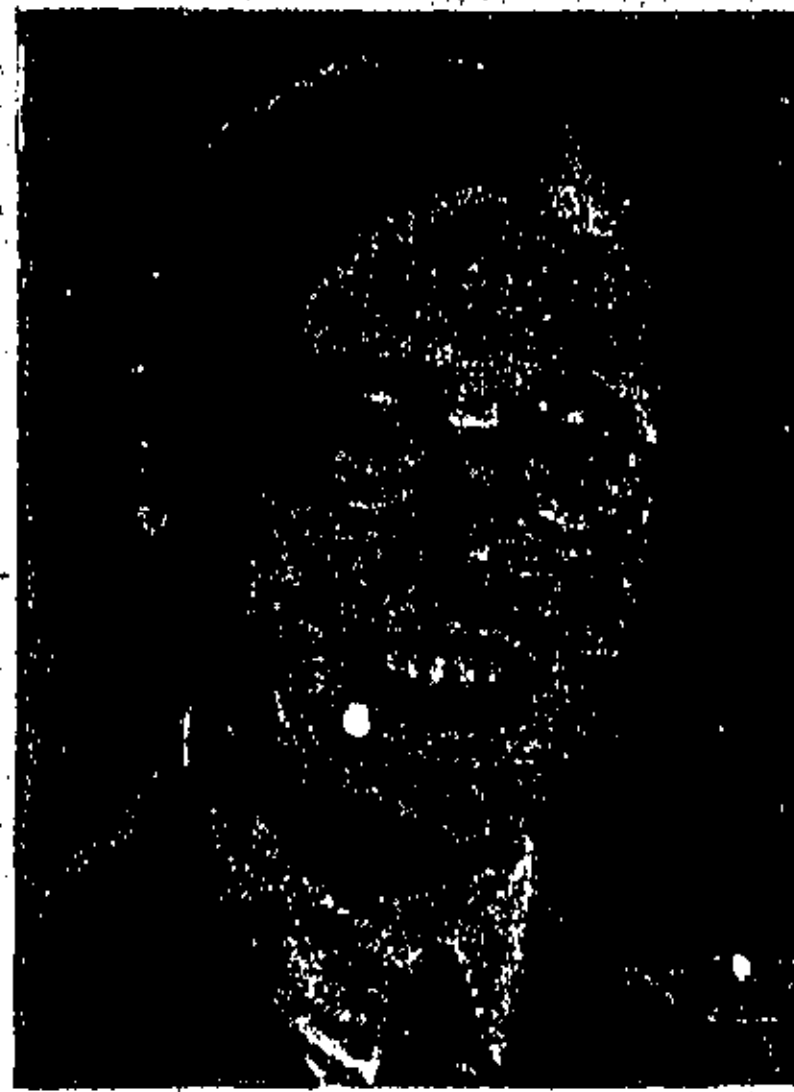

The crews of four Soviet ships in the Odessa harbour sent a common petition to the Government requesting that all merchant ships be equipped with means of self-protection.

In every demonstration the nationalist act was characterised as an act of piracy and the demand expressed that reprisals be taken. The Soviet Government has taken advantage of the feeling of indignation throughout the country to levy a tax of one half day's salary per month for the construction of five new cruisers and ten new motorships.—Transocean News Service.

HITLER DEPARTS ON HOLIDAY

Berlin, Dec. 23.
Herr Hitler's departure for Berchtesgaden to-night until January 11 sounded the "All clear" for the holidays and allayed apprehensions that some disturbing event was impending.

The rumours arose from the fact that Hitler should have gone to Berchtesgaden yesterday, but spent the whole day in consultations with, amongst others, General Hermann Goering, Prime Minister of Prussia and Reich Minister of Air, and General von Blomberg.

These consultations lasted until nearly four o'clock in the morning, and are believed to have dealt with the situation in Spain, the working of the non-intervention agreement, and economic problems.—Reuter.

ITALIAN RELATIONS WITH SPAIN

British Press Urges Clear Agreement

London, Dec. 23.
In Wednesday's leading article the "Daily Herald" demands that a clear agreement regarding Spain be reached in the course of the British-Italian negotiations now proceeding.

If Mussolini seriously wants peace in the Mediterranean, states the paper, he must make a real contribution towards its establishment. He must therefore cease to exert decisive influence in Spain.

This demand on part of the "Daily Herald," which in forcing affairs, usually reflects the official foreign policy fairly accurately, has caused considerable comment in political circles here since it is the first time for weeks that the Italian intervention in the Spanish conflict has been openly attacked by the British press.—Transocean News Service.

GAY SEASON IN AMERICA

Prosperous Yuletide This Year

New York, Dec. 23.
The United States is enjoying the most prosperous Christmas season in many years, reports from all parts of the country reveal.

Unprecedented volumes of mail are being handled by the post offices, giving a strongly reinforced postal army a colossal task. There are 20,000 regular employees, augmented by 5,000 temporary helpers here, who report the longest queues ever seen in the post office.

Delayed European liners are arriving in New York to-day and tomorrow, bringing 27,000 bags of mail, which the Post Office Department will try its best to deliver before Christmas.

Transport companies throughout the country, in the air, by rail or by road, reports the heaviest holiday travel in their experience.

Thousands of New Yorkers are bravely braving the city's prevailing icy snap for a final parade of the crowded sidewalks to-day, jamming the famous downtown stores, which are at the peak of their business turn-over.

Meanwhile, society entertains as it did in the pre-depression era, with glamour approaching the occasions of 1929.—Reuter.

FRENCH LOAN TO POLAND

Funds For Railway Extension

Warsaw, Dec. 23.
A law empowering the Polish finance minister to accept a French loan up to the limit of 1.35 milliards francs was submitted to the Polish parliament on Tuesday and will be passed with special urgency. The finance committee has already been summoned to meet on January 2 and it is intended that the measure be passed by the parliament on the 4th or 5th January.

Giving the details of the French loan the Polish press states that the original sum of 2 milliard francs has been raised after long negotiations following the devaluation of the franc to 2.6 milliard francs or approximately 650 million Zloty.

1.35 milliards of this sum will be taken in goods and the remaining 1.25 milliards as cash payments. Included in the latter is the second instalment of the French Railway loan, amounting to 100 million Zloty. This sum need not necessarily be invested exclusively in the line from East Upper Silesia to Gdynia, but this line must be finally completed and supplemented by a branch line from Czestochowa to Slonimowice.

The extension of this line, the Polish press points out, is of important strategic value and the money received for this purpose, in addition to the sums which will be applied to the strengthening of the national defenses, will be of great assistance to Poland.—Transocean News Service.

which had been fighting the Communists in northern Shensi, is stated to be marching toward Sian.

The situation in northern Shensi is causing serious concern to the local military authorities, who believe that the Red Army under Peng Teh-hui is likely to take the loyalists in the rear in an attempt to maintain contact with Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang's army around Sian.—Union News.

TIMES SQUARE PLAYBOY

"Time Square Playboy," a rollicking Warner Bros. comedy, based on the famous Broadway hit, "Home Towners," by George M. Cohan, comes to the Star Theatre on Sunday.

Warren William heads a talented cast in role of a small town boy who has made good in the big city. Bubbly over with good spirits and happiness because he has won the love of a beautiful and talented girl club singer from a younger rival, he calls on a boyhood chum, a part played by Gene Lockhart, in the old home town of Big Bend to act as his best man.

The friend is suspicious of womanish entertainers, and unaccustomed to their gay life and effusiveness, believes them all grafters. He thinks the singer is trying to pull his chum's leg for all she can get out of him, while playing around with the ex-rival.

The next morning the bride and her entire family call at the hotel suite of the best man to take him to a football game. Carrying a healthy hangover and boiling over with anger, he heaps insult after insult on their heads.

Lockhart, agitated at the trouble he has caused and believing he has wrecked all their lives, by a clever scheme manages to get the family together, where upon he clears up the entire situation in an amazing Cohanesque climax.

June Travis has the role of the night entertainer, while Barton MacLane is the combination butler and physical trainer, who furnishes much of the comedy in the picture. Dick Purcell plays the part of the bride's brother, Granville Bates and Dorothy Vaughan, her parents, while Craig Reynolds is the handsome rival who loses out to Warren William. Kathleen Lockhart plays opposite her own husband, as the wife of the small town boy.

William McGann directed.

"A lot of people are learning to economise nowadays," says a writer. "and in much the same way that a man learns to swim after he has been thrown into the river."

"THINGS TO COME"

The awful consequences of the next world war—if, as seems likely, there is to be a next—are portrayed with gripping realism in "Things to Come," the Alexander Korda film based upon H. G. Wells' famous book, "The Shape of Things to Come," showing at Majestic Theatre to-day.

The period covered by this epic is the future 1940, a hundred years of armed conflict, of destruction, chaos, pestilence, and all the nameless horrors of a war more terrible than any the world has ever known.

The action of the film begins in the year 1940, and the scene is Everytown. It is Christmas, the season of "peace on earth, good-will to men." Suddenly, from out of the blue, a hostile air force appears, against which no defence is possible. Within a few minutes Everytown is destroyed. The planes pass on—to carry death and destruction to countless other cities and towns.

The war drags on and on. Gradually European civilisation sinks in a mass of savagery and horror. When at last man has grown tired of war a pestilence scourges the earth, completing the work of destruction, and plunging suffering humanity to depths of degradation and helplessness never before reached.

The pestilence ceases, and in the medieval darkness which now covers the earth the first signs of a new dawn at last become apparent. Slowly man begins to re-create his world, working with primitive tools, gathering knowledge by experience as did forefathers of a thousand years ago. Then, from the East, comes a new civilisation, a civilisation that soon carries all before it, bringing even to Everytown a renaissance of life and art, of science and industry. A new city springs into being, a beautiful city built beneath the ground. Humanity has begun a beautiful city built beneath the ground. Humanity has begun a new quest for happiness.

As the years pass man once more becomes the master of his environment, acquiring knowledge and power such as his twentieth century predecessors never dreamed of. Above all there is peace—

THE EXCHANGE MARKET

MESSRS. ROZA BROS.

Silver prices dropped 3/8 yesterday for both deliveries, the quotations being 20 7/8 for Ready, and 20 13/16 for Forward. Silver advances reported India and speculators as having sold. The drop was due to lack of support. The tone was steady at the decline. After the official fixing the market was higher owing to Indian purchases which resulted in business at 1/8 over the quoted rate. American Silver was quoted at 44 7/8 for Spot.

The London-New York cross-rate was quoted at 49 1/8. New York-London was quoted at 49 1/8.

YESTERDAY'S QUOTATIONS OFFICIAL

The week under review opened rather quietly, but during the past few days a fair amount of business has been transacted, mainly in connection with the December Settlement which was satisfactorily negotiated on Tuesday last. The market closed for the Christmas holidays with a distinctly better tone, there being a good general demand for most stocks, resulting in a moderate improvement in prices.

Gold Mining shares opened quietly steady but have since displayed a slight tendency and generally show a marked appreciation over the week. Trading was on a fair scale.

GREAT FIRE DESTROYS CRYSTAL PALACE

Orchestra Escape As Transept Crashes

LONDON FIRE BRIGADE MOBILISED

The Crystal Palace, London's £1,500,000 amusement centre, on the top of Sydenham Hill, was destroyed on Nov. 30, in the most spectacular fire seen in Britain for many years.

The flames spread with amazing speed through the great halls. Within half an hour of the first alarm the building, 1,850ft long, and covering 25 acres was ablaze from end to end. Sparks were blown as far as Beckenham two miles away.

Rising to a height of 300ft, the flames lit up the sky of South London. The glow was seen from an aeroplane in mid-Channel and from the Devil's Dyke, near Brighton.

Hundreds of thousands of people flocked to the scene and fire engines summoned from every station in the London area had great difficulty in getting through the congested streets.

90 ENGINES AND 500 FIREMEN
More than 90 fire appliances, with 500 firemen were engaged—a record for any London fire. Owing to the height of the Palace there was great difficulty in obtaining adequate water pressure, and domestic supplies were cut down over a wide area.

Several of the men injured by flying glass and others were overcome by the terrific heat.

Hundreds of spectators were impelled when the South Tower, 282ft high, threatened to collapse into the streets from which they were watching. With great difficulty mounted police forced them back. Finally 3,000 police threw a cordon round the whole area.

HOTEL AND HOUSES EVACUATED

Houses and an hotel near the tower were evacuated and buildings at the foot of the tower were blown up with dynamite. Early this morning it was believed that the tower was safe, but the police refused to allow occupants of buildings near it to return.

An orchestra practicing in the Palace had a narrow escape, leaving the building just before the great Centre Transept crashed, with a roar that was heard for miles, burying the cars of several members.

DUKE OF KENT VISITS SCENE

The Duke of Kent, accompanied by Lord Herbert, his equerry, visited the scene.

He motored to the Crystal Palace from the West End, after attending the dinner of the Travel Association at Grosvenor House.

Wearing evening dress and a black overcoat, he stood in the roadway gazing up at the blazing buildings.

LORD LUGARD AND OUR COLONIES

"Cannot Be Handed Over"

The handing over of our Colonies to other nations would neither be consistent with our national honour nor would it make for peace, said Lord Lugard recently in the first address given at the Royal Empire Society's new building in Northumberland-avenue. Mr. Ormsby-Gore, the Colonial Secretary, presided states the "Daily Telegraph."

Lord Lugard pointed out that world movements had created a new Colonial problem. Powers without Colonies were demanding a share in the control of those possessed by others alleging difficulty in obtaining raw materials and foodstuffs.

"But economists have shown that the difficulties are caused not by the lack of colonies," added Lord Lugard, "but by post-war barriers to international trade. Moreover, the foreign exchange available has been chiefly used for the needs of armaments."

"That we should declare ourselves ready to share any economic advantages accruing from our colonies is an honourable gesture of goodwill, but we cannot hand over on demand, as though they were slaves or cattle, peoples to

CHESS SEASON OPENS

Why England Cannot Produce Masters

IMPORTANCE OF MATCH-PLAY

When "Summer Time," in the official sense, comes to an end, every chess player of repute receives postcards asking him to take part in club matches. The London League contests are now in full swing, and the numerous organisations, such as that of the Civil Service (with over a thousand members), which hold team competitions, have got to work. The Gambit Café, which, under the gracious patronage of Miss Price, three times holder of the British Ladies' Championship, has long been known as a chess rendezvous all over the world, is crowded in the afternoon and evening. When a foreign master visits London, he always calls there, and the monthly lightning tournaments attract many strong players.

There is just as much liveliness in chess circles in the Provincial cities and towns, and a number of ties for the County Championship have already been played off. This season Lancashire and Yorkshire hope to build up teams capable of beating Middlesex and Surrey, though more often than not the South gets the better of the North in this intellectual rivalry.

THE NOTTINGHAM CONTEST

Considering the large number of keen club players in this country and the high standard of their play, it is surprising that we cannot produce young masters able to hold their own with the foreign experts. The lamentable object-lesson of the great Nottingham Masters' Tournament—the four English representatives bunched together at the bottom of the final order of merit—is not likely to be forgotten in a hurry. It is, perhaps, responsible for the refusal of several strong players to play in league matches, in which the time-limit of 24 moves an hour and the 34 hours' duration of play lead to unsatisfactory results. The time-limit is too fast for accurate analysis of difficult positions, and the match does not last long enough for an end-game to be finished off. It is in the end-game that the inferiority of English representation is most marked.

Another cause of the failure of our gifted young amateurs to become masters is the impossibility of getting first-rate practice. There is no resident "great master" in London as in the days of Simpson's Divan, when I and other ambitious members of the Oxford and Cambridge Sevens could do battle for a bit of silver with Teichmann and other world-famous experts. When the jovial Blackburne and the genial Amos Burn, most unassuming of masters, passed away, there was nobody to succeed them. No professional master, as the sad fate of F. D. Yates proved could now make a decent living in England. England is an "also ran" in international chess and likely to remain so, I very much fear.

HASTINGS CONGRESS

Arrangements are already advanced for the Hastings Christmas Congress, always a very pleasant affair. Five foreign masters, Alekhine, Fune, Eliskases, Vidmar, and another, will play in the Premier Tournament, and the home representatives will be Vera Menchik (the only woman ever to attain master's rank), Sir George Thomas, T. H. Taylor, W. Winter, and A. Reynolds, who tied with Dr. Guziernik, of Paris, in one of the divisions of the Major Open Tournament at Nottingham.

Meanwhile plans for arranging matches at regular intervals for the World's Championship, which can never be decided by a Tournament, are being seriously discussed. The date of the return contest between Euwe and Alekhine has not yet been settled. The holder is a teacher of mathematics with an aptitude for original research, and he does not intend to adopt chess as his profession. He will give the chief exponent of the "romantic style" his chance of regaining the Championship, after which the claims of Capablanca, who seems to have regained his best form, and some of the younger masters will have to be considered.

BEST OF THE NEW PLAYERS

Botvinnik, the Russian champion, who tied for the first prize at Nottingham, seems to me the strongest and soundest of the new men and to have the right temperament for match-play. But Flohr, Fine, and Reshevsky are

BARRAGE OF RAYS IN AIR DEFENCE

Chemist's Plan

DEADLY NEW GASES

Hope that the menace to civilisation from the air may yet be thwarted by science was held out by Mr. Henry T. F. Rhodes, editor of the "Chemical Practitioner," at the annual meeting of the British Association of Chemists at the Waldorf Hotel, London, recently. High frequency rays projected to sufficient distances, he said, could bring down a fleet of aeroplanes carrying bombs and gas. What was wanted—however far we were off such a thing—was a barrage of rays for the protection of civilised countries. Nothing else would stop the modern aeroplane fleet.

He recalled that in simultaneous experiments on the Lake of Geneva and in England in 1931 the mechanism of a clock had, at a minimum of 100 yards, been completely disorganised by the impact of high frequency rays.

RE-ARM CHEMICALLY

As far as he knew, no means of projection over long distances had yet been achieved, but it might well be that the perfection of this invention might save civilisation from complete annihilation.

All this was said by Mr. Rhodes in enforcement of a plea that civilised countries should chemically and physically re-arm for their own protection.

There were certain governments and perhaps peoples in Europe, he pointed out, whose moral and ethical standards had degenerated to those of Neolithic man. They were more dangerous because they were armed with scientific means of destruction unparalleled in the world's history.

GERMAN INGENUITY

The Germans were producing new and deadly gases, particularly of the chlorarsenic type, of which a concentration of less than one-thousandth of an ounce per cubic yard was intolerable and quickly fatal. Lachrymators, lung-irritants, vesicants, and arsenical smokes were being made more and more efficient.

Mr. Rhodes stressed the desirability of adequate instruction being given by chemists to the civil population in air raid precautions. A representative of every professional chemical society ought to be represented on the appropriate committees. The chemical personnel should be mobilised for this purpose, and the British Association of Chemists had offered its services to the Government, in this capacity.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S FEAR OF GAS

Wanted Supply Cut Off

The days when Queen Victoria was afraid of gas were recalled by the Lord Mayor of London, Sir George Broadbridge, at a luncheon of the Gas Light and Coke Company at Fishmongers' Hall recently.

"Eighty years ago," said the Lord Mayor, "people knew so little of gas that Queen Victoria told the Duke of Wellington to cut off the gas and stop up all the pipes in Windsor Castle, because she was afraid of it."

Sir George said he believed that a company was formed in 1810 to light London with gas. Sir Humphry Davy, he added, declared that to get all the gas that was wanted to light London it would need the dome of St. Paul's for a gas holder, and that would explode.

also likely challengers, though success in tournament play is not a reliable criterion of form in a man-to-man contest with a time-limit of 15 moves an hour. It is thought (1) that every world's champion should be prepared to defend his title, when he has held it a year, and (2) that the minimum prize-money should be £1,000.

If a strong committee, representing the chief chess-playing nations, were to get to work, these conditions could be enforced, and class literature enriched by regular supply of masterpieces, which would give pleasure to Calves's votaries hundreds of years hence. I think at least 60 per cent. of the contents of any anthology of the finest recorded games would be products of match-play, in which errors in technique are less frequent than in the exciting hurly-burly of a tournament.

ROYAL NAVY

Commander G. C. Lang

Lieutenant-Commander G. Colin Lang, Assistant Inspector of Naval Ordnance at Woolwich, has been placed on the retired list at his own request with the rank of commander. He was the senior lieutenant-commander on the active list, a rank he had held since 1922.

Commander Lang has been 31 years in the Navy, joining as a cadet at Osborne in September, 1905. He was third among the 58 cadets of his term in passing out of the H.M.S. Cumberland in April, 1910, and was promoted to lieutenant in June, 1914, with five "firsts." During the War he served in the Jason, minesweeper, and the Bellerophon, battleship, up to February, 1917, when he was appointed to specialize in torpedoes; and in 1918-19 he was torpedo and executive officer of the Bonaventure, submarine depot-ship. He continued to serve with submarines after the War, in the Fearless, and Lucia, and was also squadron torpedo officer in the aircraft-carrier Eagle. In 1929 he became Superintendent of Anti-Gas Training. He is an interpreter in French and German.

WAR-TIME PATROL BOATS

H.M.S. P.59 has now joined the Reserve Fleet at Devonport at extended notice. This leaves in commission only one of the 64 patrol boats built during the War to supplement the destroyers for use in convoy, escort, and anti-submarine duties. Since the construction of destroyers fully occupied the firms accustomed to naval work, the building of the patrol boats was entrusted to merchant firms. An order was given for 24 vessels, and later for a further 30. At the end of 1918, in anticipation of unrestricted submarine warfare, 10 existing P-boats were adapted as decoy ships and termed PQ-boats, but to avoid confusion with the regular Q-boats they were afterwards styled PC-boats. Ten new PC-boats were ordered in 1917. The latest of these, PC.74, is the only survivor of the whole series, and serves in the 1st Anti-Submarine Flotilla at Portland.

OF TRAINSFuel Economy
Through StreamliningThe railway companies have for some time been considering the effect of streamlining upon speed and running costs, and light was thrown on this question by a paper read recently by Mr. F. O.
Johansen at the Institution of Mechanical Engineers.Mr. Johansen, who is engineering research officer of the London
Midland and Scottish Railway, was dealing with the air resistance of passenger trains, and told of the comprehensive study of this subject carried out in a wind tunnel on reduced scale models of L.M.S.R. and L.N.E.R. passenger rolling stock. The main investigation related to trains comprising a locomotive and six coaches, in which the aerodynamic forces of each vehicle were separately measured; the effect of train length on the resistance of the last coach was determined; and hence the resistances of trains up to 12 coaches in length were estimated.
The forces on the bodies and chassis of certain coaches were also measured separately. Subsequent tests were made to determine the reductions of air resistance obtainable by rounding the front of the engine smoke-box, covering the tender and the gaps between adjoining vehicles, fairing
the trailing edge of the last coach, smoothing the coach bodies, and enclosing the under-carriage.

75 PER CENT. REDUCTION

The results showed that with fast trains of conventional design air resistance might absorb large powers, of which 75 per cent. or more might be saved by streamlining. Valuable reductions of power at high speeds could be achieved by modifications involving no radical departure from conventional forms of locomotive and coaches. It was found that while with ideal streamlining air resistance could be reduced by 75 per cent., it could be reduced by 50 per cent. without drastic departure from conventional design.
The corresponding fuel economy was in the region of 21 an hour at train speeds of 100 miles an hour, or alternatively the maximum speed could be increased by 12 to 25 per cent. according to the degree of streamlining adopted.Air resistance was augmented by side winds, the increase being mainly due to frontal pressure on exposed surfaces. The lateral wind force, perpendicular to the train, was large, but the consequent increase of forward resistance due to fringe and bearing friction was relatively small except for highly streamlined trains. The worst natural wind was not directly ahead but ranged from 30deg. to 60deg.
on either side of the ahead direction. Streamlining measures were, on the whole, more effective in side winds than in direct winds or in still air. The gaps between the coaches accounted for relatively little air resistance, and much of it could be obviated by abutting coaches as closely together as practicable and covering the remaining gap to the general contour of the train. A surprisingly large proportion of the air resistance of a coach, especially under the action of oblique winds, was contributed by the bogies and un-dercarriage structure. It was consequently advantageous to use articulated stock, to include the undercarriages in streamlining measures and to extend the fairings to the ends of the coaches, leaving no exposed gaps.

NOSE AND TAIL FAIRINGS

A fair shape at the tail end of a train reduced air resistance to an extent which was more marked the more complete the streamlining, but greater advantage could be gained by fairing the front than by fairing the rear end. The air resistance of a conventional locomotive, amounting to from 20 to 40 per cent. of that of a complete six-coach train, could be reduced 25 per cent. by rounding the smoke-box front and covering the tender to the general contour of the train. The streamlining of steam locomotives called for aerodynamic study of the machine as a whole attention being paid simultaneously to air resistance, the deflexion of the exhaust away from the driver's vision, the access of air to the fire grate and bearings, and the design from the standpoint of accessibility and operating convenience.
The full benefit of measures to reduce air resistance could be realized only if the locomotive and coaches were all streamlined. The

PHILIPPINE MINING
NEWSConfidence in a new mining law which will protect the mining industry, the investor, and the government alike was expressed by Benguet Consolidated and Balatoc in their semi-annual reports.Ideal streamlined train was a continuous cylindrical body with well-rounded ends, having a polished surface free from external fittings and irregularities. A tubular structure, incorporating a streamlined skin of sheet metal suggested itself for such construction along these lines.Stockholders of both companies were assured of the interest of the new government in the creation of a strong Philippine mining industry.The Philippine Government, in the preparation of this law, has thoroughly acquainted itself with the problems of the mining industry so we may expect a fair constructive measure under which the industry may continue to thrive.
is now F. O. Happersmann, vice-president and assistant general manager of both companies, expressed the sentiments of his directors in the Balatoc report.

SHORTAGE OF CARGO SHIPS

Britain's War-Time Danger

"In the event of war, our depleted Royal Navy will want to call on some thousands of men from the Merchant Service. I am going to state categorically here what I have already officially advised the Admiralty is the considered opinion of both the expert staffs of the Shipping Federation and of the ship-owners themselves—that there will be no men available from the Merchant Service." This statement was made before the Royal Society of Arts recently by Mr. E. H. Watts, Vice-Chairman of the Shipping Federation. He estimated that at an "unquestionably optimistic" estimate, the British Mercantile Marine was short of war-time requirements of cargo carrying vessels by approximately 700 ships, and called for more energetic measures on the part of the Government.

"Instead of the defeatist policy we cannot compete, so we must have fewer ships," Mr. Watts declared, "let us build up our fleet and, meanwhile, take steps to secure its rightful employment. Since 1929 scores of ships have been scrapped without replacement, and under the Government scheme only one has been built in place of two scrapped after 1934. These circumstances have not only led to a reduction in ships, but have created serious difficulties in personnel."
